2020 election results live cnn

Photo: DenisProduction.com (Shutterstock)First of all, you are by no means obliged to monitor the results of elections that come late into the night. You're not obliged to follow them at all. After you voted, you did your part, and putting in hours of exit polls and live news from cities across Pennsylvania won't help your preferred candidate win. If watching today's news seems too much and/or evokes memories of 2016, skip it - we probably won't have a winner tonight. Watch the movie instead. But if you're counting the days until the giant red and blue touchscreen maps take over network and cable news again, today's your night. If your plans for this evening involve inadvertently remembering the locations of certain counties in Florida and Wisconsin, and you can't wait to devour even the slightest morsels of preliminary results, here's how to track election coverage. It's Election Day and maybe if things go as expected, the start of the election month.... Read moreHo way to watch today's election resultsThis should be relatively easy to find election coverage tonight, even if you don't have a cable. If you have an antenna and can watch your local stations, you'll be able to capture results coming on ABC, CBS, NBC and PBS, although each network will also provide free live streams of their coverage via YouTube. G/O Media can get commission2-Pack: Juku STEAM Coding KitsThose with cable will also have its choice of networks, including CNN, Fox News, MSNBC and C-SPAN, some of which will also be available through streaming services - although you may need cable login to access them. (FWIW: C-SPAN has the voice of Lifehacker deputy editor Jordan Calhoun, who recently filed his motion to get all your political coverage out of an ever-boring but ultimately excellent cable channel.) In the meantime, if you'd like to see something that's adjacent to the election that has nothing to do with this year's race, here are 10 election-themed movies to watch instead of real results. The lowest network in your regular TV rotation is also the only place I would ever watch... Read moreWhat do we get the election results? Unless there is a massive landslide in one direction or another, it is unlikely that we will find a winner of the presidential election tonight - and the same goes for some state-level races. This isn't unusual. As presidential historian Michael Beschloss recently stated on Twitter, we did not know the winner of the presidential race before midnight in 1960, 1968, 1976, 2000, 2004 or 2016. In terms of timing, there are various factors involved, including whether state voting legislation allows postal ballots to be counted before Election Day (more on this here). Similarly, it depends on when polling stations in each state close. According to CNN, the first polls .m close at 6 p.m. So, for In Florida, polling stations close at 7 p.m. They've been counting postal ballots for weeks, so we can have results there much sooner than states like Pennsylvania, where ballots cast earlier start counting today. Let's get it out of the way first: It's very unlikely we'll find a winner... Read moreWhat every candidate has to do to win? That is the point at which we remind you of the depressing reality of the Electoral College. Because it's all about the 270-vote race in the Electoral College, special attention - both during the campaigns and tonight - is devoted to a handful of key battle states such as Arizona, Florida, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin (among others). So when we look at potential paths to victory, it's usually based on how a candidate can reach that magic number of 270. What Trump needs to do to win now, CNN predicts Trump has 125 electoral votes, all but guaranteed. From there, the easiest way for him to secure his reelection bid would be to win Pennsylvania, and one other battle state like Arizona.What Biden needs to do to win CNN has provided no predictions about the number of electoral votes Biden has (presumably) firmly in his column. But given that he's ahead in the polls - especially in rust belt states that went to Trump in 2016 - the cable network has identified his path to victory as don't mess it up. What if there's a tie? A draw in an election is not questionable. One way this could happen, CNN reports, is if Trump wins Florida, Georgia, Iowa, North Carolina and Ohio, along with Pennsylvania, Maine's second congressional district and Nebraska's second congressional district. In this situation, both candidates would have 269 electoral votes and members of the House of Representatives elected today would choose the winner, with each state winning the vote. But it's a little more complicated (this explanation from Brookings goes into detail). Usually five weeks after the presidential election, we focus on the candidates.... Read moreWhat about our mental health? Great question, we've been thinking a lot about one here. Start by inventing an election-related stress plan today. This should at least include a set party (for yourself) and some rules when you finally  stite, such as setting your phone to Do Not Disturb mode and turning off other notifications. Your common sense is also something you should think about when watching election coverage itself. Dial up your anxiety by strengthening your basic understanding of how things will work tonight, which includes a realistic timeline for announcing the results, as well as overreading at polling stations or early election numbers. And remember: if at any time while watching election news you decide it's too much, you can and should turn it off. If you're looking for something else to watch, we've already noticed our tips election-themed films. There's also a livestream of polar bears and previous lists we've compiled to provide you with alternatives to both presidential debates. good luck. We don't know exactly what election night will bring, but it's unlikely to be the same... (Bloomberg) - South Africa's main stock index fell 0.3 percent on Friday as renewed investor concerns about the coronavirus weakened appetite for risky assets and caused a pause in the global stock rally. The FTSE/JSE Africa All Share Index retreated from Thursday's record high, narrowing its advance to 0.7 percent from Monday. The benchmark still extended its series of weekly gains to four, the longest in eight months. Diversified global mining giants BHP Group Plc and Anglo American Plc weighed the heaviest on the market as most metal prices fell in risk sentiment. Both shares were down 1.4 percent. Bank shares dragged the benchmark lower as the rand fell along with other emerging market currencies, a day after the South African central bank left its key lending rate unchanged. Standard Bank Group Ltd. fell 3.2%, Nedbank Group Ltd. by 3.2% and Absa Group Ltd. fell 2.9%. The sector index slumped the most decrease of 2.7%. Price Group Ltd. gained 1.5% in a positive response to the retailer's trading update. The South African general retailers' index was 0.5 per cent higher. Global technology investor and benchmark behemoth Naspers Ltd. gave the best share of the overall market as it climbed 1.8 percent to a record high as partially owned Chinese internet giant Tencent Holdings Ltd. climbed to a new high for a third day in Hong Kong. Prosus NV, which owns Naspers' 31% stake in Tencent, gained 3.3%. The main index was also boosted by global luxury equipment retailer Richemont, which gained 2.2 per cent at the end of the week, when it reported a surge in Chinese sales.
